IN THE SUPREME COURT OF NEW SOUTH WALES
ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION.
Victoria by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, &c., &c.
To the Widow and next of kin of CHARLES SMITH, late of Dubbo, in the colony of New South Wales, Grazier, deceased.
GREETING:
WHEREAS it hath been represented to us in our Supreme Court of New South Wales that the said CHARLES SMITH departed this life on or about the seventeenth day of August last, intestate, having at the time of his death lands, goods, chattels, and credits in the said colony, we hereby peremptorily cite you to appear personally, or by your respective proctors, before our said Court, at the Court-house, in King-street, Sydney, on the twenty-second day of March instant, then and there to accept or refuse letters of administration of the lands, goods, chattels, and credits of the said deceased, or to show cause (if you know any) why the same should not be committed to ROBERT SMITH, of Cow Plains, near Dubbo, aforesaid, Grazier, a creditor of the said deceased.
Witness the Honorable Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, Knight, Companion of the Bath, and Chief Justice of our said Court, at Sydney, the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.
D. B. HUTCHINSON, Prothonotary.
GEORGE TAYLOR, Proctor for the said Robert Smith, by WILLIAM TEALE, his agent.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF NEW SOUTH WALES.
IN INSOLVENCY.
In the matter of the application of JAMES O'NEILL, of Coorumbong, for a Certificate of Conformity.
TAKE NOTICE that on FRIDAY, the twenty-fourth day of March instant, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, an application will be made on behalf of the abovenamed insolvent to this honorable Court that the decision of his Honor the Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates, made and given on the eighteenth day of October, in the year One thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, refusing a certificate of conformity to the said insolvent, may be altered and varied, and that a certificate may be granted to the said insolvent, after such suspension thereof as to the said Court shall seem reasonable and just, pursuant to the provisions of the rider to the Act of Council 10 Victoria, number 14.
Dated this sixth day of March, A.D. 1871.
THOMAS O'KEEFFE, Attorney for the said insolvent, West Maitland; by RUSSELL and HOLDEN, his agents, Sydney.

HASTINGS ELECTORATE.
LETTER TO R. B. SMITH, ESQ.
Kempsey, Macleay River,
December, 1870.
SIR,—We, the undersigned, electors of the Hastings, desire to inform you that we have learned with feelings of surprise and indignation that you have presumed to take a seat in the Legislative Assembly as the Representative of this electorate. Whatever legal rights a Committee of the House may have conferred on you in this matter, you must be sensible of the fact that you sit in defiance of the wish of a large majority of the electors, and consequently have no moral right to legislate on our behalf.
Doubtless, Sir, you profess to respect the laws, and have sworn to maintain the Constitution under which we live. Notwithstanding (in taking your seat) you have not hesitated to violate one of its most important principles, viz., "Government by a majority."
On the hustings you declared yourself to be desirous of promoting the advancement of this electorate, yet have not scrupled to sacrifice to your vanity and ambition the interests of a large majority of its inhabitants, whom practically you have sought to disfranchise.
You cannot be ignorant of the fact that a large amount of the support you obtained on the occasion of your first soliciting our suffrages was due to the recommendation of political partisans, and to the fact of your being a stranger to us and unknown to politics. You must also have seen that a more intimate knowledge on our part of your qualifications and views only resulted in the loss of many of your political supporters. We remind you that the verdict of the constituency has been unmistakably pronounced against you, and that no action of a committee of the House, though practically disfranchising us, can constitute you our representative, or enable you to retain the seat with honour to yourself or advantage to us; and we cannot refrain from expressing our surprise and regret at the want of independence and correct principle you appear to have evinced in this matter.
In conclusion, we repudiate you as our representative, and dispute your right to sit and act as such. We declare that we did not elect you—that you do not possess our confidence—and we now, in accordance with your pledge during the canvass, call upon you to resign your seat as the representative of this electorate, believing your retention of it to be prejudicial to our interests, contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, and calculated to bring representative institutions into contempt.
We have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servants.
The above letter has been delivered to R. B. Smith, Esq., signed by J. Warne, Esq., O. O. Dangar, J.P., F. Litchfield, Geo. Henderson, A. R. Oakes, J.P., J. H. Kemp, J.P., Rev. C. Coghlan, E. F. Rudder, J. Poole, E. Rudder, J.P., J. F. Broad, J.P., Joshua Cochrane, J.P., A. M. Coleman, and over 800 other electors of the Hastings. Other lists are yet in course of signature.
O. O. DANGAR,
Honorary Secretary to Committee.

CHAPMAN'S ENTIRE WHEAT FLOUR.
Highly recommended by the faculty as the most nutritious and easily digested food for infants, children, and invalids. Its richness in phosphates makes it invaluable during teething; it is a singularly digestive and nourishing food for children, and is an excellent diet for invalids, being retained in the stomach when arrowroot, corn-flour, and similar articles are rejected.
From the LANCET, 2nd April, 1870:—
"We hope it will take the place of the purely starchy compounds now in use, both in the case of children and adults."
From Professor Attfield, F.C.S., Professor of Practical Chemistry, to the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, &c.:—
"Its richness in gluten or flesh-forming material, and earthy phosphates or bone and teeth forming substance, show it to be a very valuable food, especially for children. It is incomparably superior to arrowroot, corn-flour, and other forms of starch, which contribute but little to the formation of bone or muscle."

WAGER OF BATTLE IN 1817.—I witnessed to-day (November 17th) a scene which would have been a reproach to Turkey, or the Emperor of Dahomey—a wager of battle in Westminster Hall. Thornton was brought up for trial on an appeal after acquittal for murder. No one seemed to have any doubt of the prisoner's guilt; but he escaped owing to the unfitness of a profound real-property lawyer to manage a criminal trial. For this reason the public sense was not offended by recourse being had to an obsolete proceeding. The court was crowded to excess. Lord Ellenborough asked Reader whether he had anything to move, and he having moved that Thornton should be permitted to plead, he was brought to the bar. The declaration, or count, being read to him, he said, "Not guilty. And this I am ready to defend with my body." At the same time he threw a large glove or gauntlet on to the floor of the court. Though we all expected this plea, yet we all felt astonishment—at least I did—at beholding before our eyes a scene acted which we had read of as one of the disgraceful institutions of our half-civilised ancestors. No one smiled. The judges looked embarrassed.—Diary of Henry Crabb Robinson.

LAW.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY.

SITTINGS IN BANCO.

BEFORE CHEEK } Sir ALFRED STEPHEN, C. J., Mr. Justice and } and Mr. Justice FAUCETT.

THE QUEEN V. GOODISON.—CROWN CASE.

This was a special case from the Sydney Quarter Sessions.

Mr. Foster appeared for the Crown. There was no appearance for the prisoner.

The prisoner, Robert James Goodison, had been tried and convicted at Darlinghurst, before Mr. District Court Judge Dowling, on an indictment for having stolen three cheques for the respective sums of £9 19s. 9d., £15, and £21 5s. 6d., each of which cheques was alleged in this indictment to have been the property of her Majesty the Queen. The evidence by which this indictment was sustained was the following:—That there were several British military pensioners residing in various parts of this colony, and that the duty of paying their pensions rested upon Mr. Middleton, the resident officer of the Commissariat Department. The prisoner was employed in the same department, and was under the control of Mr. Middleton. The practice as to payment of the pensioners was that these pensioners, or their agents, signed certain vouchers or receipts; and this having been done, the prisoner prepared cheques for the amounts to be paid to the several parties. The cheques thus drawn were presented to the head of the department by the prisoner for signature, and, having been signed, remained in the prisoner's hands for delivery or transmission to the persons who were to be paid. The three cheques forming the subject matter of this information had been drawn and signed in this way. They were drawn against certain funds belonging to the British Government in a Sydney bank. The first-named cheque was made payable to one B. Tyrrell, a pensioner; the second, to one C. S. Black, also a pensioner; and the third one, to G. A. Gordon, who was then Clerk of Petty Sessions at Windsor, by whom the proceeds were to be distributed among four pensioners. It was shown that it was clearly the duty of the prisoner to hand or forward the cheques, either to the pensioners themselves or their acknowledged agents, and that he had no right to use these cheques for any other purpose. The prisoner had been employed in the department for some years, and had served both in Victoria and in this colony, consequently he must have been well acquainted with the practice of the department as to the mode of dealing with these cheques for pensions. It was not shown that there had been any specific directions given by Mr. Middleton as to the particular cheques forming the subject of the prosecution, but the prisoner had been often told to take great care in dealing with all these cheques for pensions, so that there might be no miscarriage of them. It further appeared that about two years ago there had been some question as to the cheque to Mr. Gordon, and as to its having been given on account of that gentleman's agency for four persons, when fresh authority on the behalf of such four persons had been procured, the pre-existing authority not being immediately at hand. There was ample evidence of the prisoner having applied the proceeds of these cheques to his own use, and the only real questions were those of law which had been reserved by the Judge below for the decision of the Supreme Court. These were, first, whether the evidence had been sufficient to establish a charge of larceny at common law or otherwise; secondly, whether there was evidence of prisoner having been a bailee of these cheques; thirdly, whether it had been properly held that the cheques were to be, for the purposes of the Bailees Act, regarded as goods and chattels.

Their HONORS sustained the conviction, holding that there was sufficient evidence to sustain such conviction for larceny by the prisoner, as a servant, at common law.

M'KENZIE V. HEALY.—DISTRICT COURT APPEAL.

This was an appeal from a decision by Mr. District Court Judge Simpson—in the Metropolitan District Court—nonsuiting the plaintiff.

Mr. Butler appeared for the appellant, and Mr. Darley for the respondent.

The appellant in this case, Mr. M'Kenzie, was the plaintiff in the Court below, and had sued the respondent, Mr. Healy, for £34, being the proceeds of a cheque received by respondent from one M'Mahon, since insolvent, of whose estate appellant was the official assignee. The suit was instituted under the amended Insolvency Act, 25 Victoria, No. 8, upon the ground that at the time of this payment M'Mahon was, as Healy knew, in insolvent circumstance, or would be placed in such circumstances by this payment, &c. The Judge had nonsuited, upon the ground that there was no evidence of Healy's knowledge of M'Mahon being in insolvent circumstances, &c., at the time of this payment. The question was whether there had been any such evidence. The principal facts were these. Healey had received the cheque in question from M'Mahon on the 23rd July, at which time an old debt of £110 from M'Mahon had been standing for about eighteen months, for payment of which debt there had, it was said, been many unsuccessful demands. The cheque was presented and paid on the 28th July. Just before this Healy had obtained from M'Mahon a promissory note, payable on demand, for the £110, and about the same time there had been a successful suit against M'Mahon by other parties for £34, which M'Mahon had been unable to satisfy. The promissory note for £110 was sued upon directly afterwards, and judgment obtained by default. On the 11th of August M'Mahon's estate was sequestrated. On the part of Healy it had been contended in the Court below, and was now again argued, that although the circumstances were such as might create suspicion, there must be something more than suspicion made out ere the case could be properly sent to the jury in such a suit as the present, where a defendant was said to have taken payment "knowing" that the person making the same was in insolvent circumstances, or would be placed in such circumstances by such payment. For the appellant it was urged that there was here such evidence from which an actual knowledge of M'Mahon's circumstances by the defendant might be presumed that the Judge below had acted wrongly in nonsuiting.

Their HONORS were unanimous in holding that there had been ample evidence to go to a jury of Healy's knowledge as to M'Mahon's circumstances; and the CHIEF JUSTICE stated that not only was that his opinion, such sufficient evidence to go to a jury, but also enough to justify a verdict against Healy in the absence of any rebutting testimony. The appeal was therefore sustained, and the decision of the Judge below reversed, with costs.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE Mr. District Court Judge DOWLING.

A number of ca. sa. motions of no importance were disposed of.

M'DERMOTT V. BERTOLACINE.

This was an application for rehearing upon an affidavit filed to the effect that plaintiff came into the Court just a moment too late. Plaintiff also filed an affidavit that he had merits in his case. Rehearing granted. Mr. Pigott for plaintiff, and Mr. R. Robinson for respondent.

MOORE V. AITKEN.

Plaintiff, a schoolmaster, brought an action to recover the sum of £7 7s. for tuition of defendant's two sons, in lieu of one quarter's notice. Plaintiff's case was that in the month of January defendant placed his two sons at his school, agreeing to pay £7 7s. per quarter. It was also stipulated in plaintiff's circular (one of which defendant had received) that a quarter's notice was necessary to the termination of the contract. The boys remained three quarters at Mr. Moore's educational establishment, but two or three days after the fourth quarter had been entered upon, plaintiff received a note from defendant in which he stated that he had determined upon withdrawing his children from the school. Defendant's defence was that he was not liable for the amount, inasmuch as he had not received the circular from plaintiff which contained a stipulation as to a quarter's notice, and that therefore he did not enter into such an agreement. He sent his sons to the school quarter by quarter, and made no contract for a quarter's notice. His HONOR thought the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and gave a verdict for the full amount. Mr. Benbow for plaintiff, and Mr. H. Deane for defendant.

BOYD V. REYNOLDS.

This was an action brought by James Boyd against Charles Reynolds for goods sold and delivered. Plaintiff claimed £3. The matter chiefly in dispute was the amount of wood cut and supplied by plaintiff to defendant. Verdict for the plaintiff, £1 19s. 6d. Mr. C. Davis appeared for the plaintiff, the defendant was undefended.

COSTELLO V. HAYNES.

This was an action brought by David Costello against John Wells Haynes to recover the sum of £9 4s. for bailiff's fees. Plaintiff had been placed in possession of certain goods, under a bill of sale to defendant, by a Mr. Vaughan, acting as defendant's agent. Plaintiff, having been very summarily ejected from possession thereof by the giver of the bill of sale, now sought to recover compensation for his services. The Mr. Vaughan above-named died since the action was brought; but his son, associated with the late Mr. Vaughan in business, gave evidence for the plaintiff as to the transaction. For the defence it was contended that Mr. Vaughan had throughout acted as the agent, and had been recognised by plaintiff as the agent. Consequently, plaintiff's claim was against Mr. Vaughan's executors, and not against defendant. The Court nonsuited the plaintiff. Mr. Smith appeared for the plaintiff Mr. Gannon for the defendant.

KELLICK V. DOYLE.

This was an action brought by John Kellick against John Doyle, for work and labour done. The claim arose for commission on building work done by contract, and was the subject of evidence—plaintiff and defendant disagreeing. Plaintiff claimed £8 0s. 6d. Verdict for plaintiff, £6 6s. Mr. Henry Driver appeared for the plaintiff. The defendant was undefended.

LISTER V. HARROLD.

This was an action brought by Thomas Lister and John Lister, trading under the style of "Lister and Son," against Mrs. Harrold, administratrix de son tort of the late J. Harrold. Plaintiffs claimed £6 5s. for the debt due by defendant's husband. The debt had been transferred from a third party. Defendant agreed to pay so much a month. Verdict for plaintiff.

M'LACHLAN V. CAMPBELL.

This was an action brought by Hugh M'Lachlan, for freight of ship, sails and produce. Plaintiff claimed £4 18s. It was admitted that the things had been put on board, but denied that plaintiff was entitled to charge for the same by reason of a special agreement made. Verdict for the plaintiff, £2. Mr. Colyer appeared for the plaintiff.

Three were fined 5s. and 5s. costs each, one 20s. and 5s. costs, three informations were withdrawn unconditionally, and one upon payment of costs. In four cases by inspector Seymour against persons for keeping dirty premises, two were withdrawn on payment of costs, one postponed for a week, and another was withdrawn. John Williams v. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—I very much wish our railway authorities could be induced to peruse the extract from the Mark Lane Express contained in your issue of this morning. The reasons set forth in this for the necessity of our railway charges being regulated in such a way as to enable produce to be sent from our outlying districts with a reasonable hope of profit to the growers (a matter at present quite out of the question) are most excellent; and the proof therein given, by trial already made in England, that the traffic would be enormously increased if once our small farmers found that they could avail themselves of our metropolitan market is apparent to any one of reasonable ideas.

During a recent visit to our Southern districts, I was surprised to find that the completion of the railway to Goulburn, instead of being a benefit had been ruin to the community. I expected to find that the country towns would suffer, and the amount of business transacted in them much diminished; but I was by no means prepared to see the wholesale ruin that it has brought about amongst the small farmers and settlers generally. During the good old times the farmer did a little carrying on the road, or at all events he participated in the enormous expenditure for carriage then paid, and while the railway was in course of construction, the expenditure consequent upon this; but now the whole has taken flight, the roads are deserted and trafficless, and this is not compensated by the facility of the carriage to market now offered—simply, because the charges are, in many cases, as much as the produce would realise. I saw during my visit quantities of the most delicious fruit and vegetables used for feeding pigs, and I was assured that dairy produce was all but worthless, except for a small local demand. A box of eggs containing twelve dozen would cost 5s. for carriage—about the price realised wholesale, less the agent's commission; a fat calf, 8s.—about one-third of its total value; and all other things in proportion.

Now to me it seems most desirable that this traffic should be fully opened up, if even at a loss. The whole community pay the loss and would participate in the advantages of having such abundance at our doors? but I firmly believe that, instead of being a loss, twelve months hence would see it result in large profits. The railway trains run to Goulburn twice a day, and might just as well be full as empty,—at present the last is most frequently the case. I firmly believe that if the present fares were halved that the line would be used four or five times by the same individual that now uses it once in two or three months; and in fact that, after a while, people would become accustomed to come up to town on many small occasions that are set aside to accumulate, and one journey made to serve for all. And if the traffic charges were adjusted according to the value of the commodity carried, as suggested in the extract I previously referred to, we would very soon see a better state of things. The country is now labouring under a debt of ten millions, the interest of which is yearly drained from the colony, for that what do we get?—a comfortable journey certainly so far as the railways run, but little more. Our wool was carried as cheaply by the old teams, time was no great object, and the half-million now paid away to other countries for interest was then expended amongst ourselves. The only people really benefited have been, first—our legislators, who travel for nothing, and a few contractors and officials. While on this subject I would remark, that the expensive way in which our railway lines have been made does not require a professional eye to perceive. The substantial and expensive character of the stations, and station masters' residences, erected at the most insignificant places, would astonish an American traveller. Whole miles of shallow cuttings are made; at even depths of from 16 to 10 feet, where the train might as well run on the surface, or nearly so,—for what reason is best known to the engineers and contractors.

I give you the above as the observation of one who has returned after an absence of some years, and hence better able to notice the changes.

TRAVELLER.

Sydney, 9th March.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—With reference to a letter signed "Miles" in to-day's issue, it is very pleasing to observe that I was right with regard to "the hitch" that might occur (not necessarily so, only that "Miles" coincides with me) with regard to General Courts Martial. On referring again to my letter, I think our soldier friend has entirely mistaken a "Regular's" ideas with regard to barrack life, in which we do not agree. With some ten years' experience, allow me to state I was never permitted as a commissioned officer to anticipate that any regimental difficulty "could be easily obviated by a short clause or two" in any Act of Parliament; nor that even the Commander-in-chief himself could suggest any fresh clauses, when required, at a moment's notice. Further, that regiments of the Imperial army do not go by the penny-a-liner denomination of a "heterogeneous congregation of men," nor has any officer on joining, or private when recruited, found there was not "one non-commissioned officer to begin with." I maintain it requires the experience of one of the happy-go-easy privates of General Bombastes Furioso's force to acknowledge having "the experience of barrack life," with such peculiarities, which "Regular" has decidedly not had. I maintain, irrespective of "Miles" hinting at my ignorance of military life—that if we are to have a defence force on the principle of the regular army—let us cry "avaunt" to the happy-go-lucky disciplined soldier; let those who have to pay for it demand officers who have seen what war is in every form—let us not pay taxes for a "heterogeneous congregation of men without commissioned officers to begin with," and that can arrange every regimental irregularity by referring it to Parliament. I should suggest a force subject to the same military law as the Imperial Army, that should they hereafter be serving together in the same garrison, an Act could be passed allowing commissioned officers of the colonial force to sit on courts martial with the officers of the regular army.

REGULAR.

March 10th.

P.S.—The last clause in my letter only refers to the late debate in Parliament, and with reference to the possibility of England again sending out troops in case of war.

TO THE CITY CORPORATION.

(PER FAVOUR OF THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD.)

GENTLEMEN,—A stranger arriving in Sydney, and not knowing the virtues many of your body possess, not having had the opportunity of witnessing the zeal with which some of you watch over our charities, &c., would set you down as the most heartless set as well as inefficient body in the colonies, for verily nowhere are such wretched roads to be found.

If you considered for a moment what that noble animal the horse has done and is daily doing for you, or if you believed in the transmigration of souls, and that you might perchance some day reappear as a horse, and without the power of proclaiming your wrongs (this would come very hard upon my friend Alderman Raphael), you would evince greater consideration for him, and especially for his "poor feet."

It is a wonder that there are not more accidents with the loose stones in all directions. There should be a new by-law, to the effect that every alderman should be answerable for any accidents occurring in his ward arising from the neglected state of the roads, the penalty being to work on the roads for a certain period, according to the nature of the accident.

What has become of the roller—was it merely intended for "Exhibition" purposes?

If you would take a walk down Erskine and Boomerang streets, you would perhaps be convinced of the well-grounded complaint of your friend,

THE HORSE.

THE ELIJAH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—Your correspondent in to-day's Herald, "First Violin," says there are no arpeggio movements for the violins in the whole oratorio. What does he call the accompaniment to the passage, "Thanks be to God," just preceding the chorus bearing that name?

But there are other lovely bits for the first violin which I wonder your critic did not miss. I allude to those delicate ascending passages for the first violin between the phrases in the quartett, "Cast your burden." They might have been played on Tuesday while the voices were dwelling on the last word or note of each phrase, but I did not hear them. They are marked to be played after the pauses, and when the voices are silent, and they were so played when I heard "Elijah" at Exeter Hall some twenty-two years ago, when Mendelssohn himself conducted the performance, and they had a most charming effect.

COMMERCIAL.

PRODUCE CIRCULARS.

MORT AND CO.—Wool: In our last monthly circulars, we took occasion to point out the probability of a further improvement in the price of greasy wool. The opinion then expressed was strikingly confirmed at our sale on Wednesday, when an advance of nearly 1d per lb was established on light and superior parcels. Our catalogue contained an unusual number of odd bales and small parcels, some of which had to be passed on owners' account. But on the whole the sale passed off very satisfactorily. Since our last we have sold about 1000 bales, details of which will be found below. Sheepskins were in active request at our sale on Wednesday when we quitted 47 considerable lots at from 2½d to 5¾d per lb. according to condition and quality. Hides: The supply to-day was only moderate, and prices ruled very firm for well-conditioned lots; we quitted those on our catalogue at prices ranging up to 24s 8d per hide. Tallow: There was decided improvement in the demand for shipping parcels at the sales held this afternoon; trade lots were, however, without alteration. We quitted 261 casks at from £37 to £38 5s per ton as detailed at foot. Leather: The active request of recent quotations. Maravilla Cocoa.—For Breakfast.—The Globe says "various importers and manufacturers have attempted to attain a reputation for their prepared cocoas; but we doubt whether any thorough success had been achieved until Messrs. Taylor Brothers discovered the extraordinary qualities of 'Maravilla Cocoa. Adapting their perfect system of preparation to the finest of all species of the Theobroma, they have produced an article which supersedes every other cocoa in the market. Entire solubility, a delicate aroma, and a rare concentration of the purest elements of nutrition distinguish the Maravilla cocoa above all others. For homœopaths and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold in packets only by all grocers, of whom also may be had Taylor, Brothers' Original Homœopathic Cocoa and Soluble Chocolate. Steam Mills—Brick-lane, London.—Adv

Dr de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil.—The superior flavour of this oil has been universally appreciated. Dr. J. Kidd, who has largely prescribed it, states: "For many years I have recommended Dr. de Jongh's Oil, and I have found by experience that it agrees perfectly with many persons who were unable to use the so-called 'refined,' or white cod liver oil, from its sickly taste, which was not at all complained of in Dr. de Jongh's Oil." Sold only in capsuled Imperial half-pints, pints, and quarts, by all chemists, druggists, and storekeepers. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77, Strand, London.—Adv.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1871.

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday, there being no quorum at the usual hour, the Speaker adjourned the House to Tuesday next at 3 o'clock.

The "scenes" in the Assembly are the entertainment of the people. They have lost that feeling of astonishment which is naturally felt when a respectable body is first disgraced. We can easily suppose that the children who laugh at the drunken gymnastics of a father, until used to his conduct, would feel both sorrow and fear. Having suffered the mortification, whatever it may have been, of looking on when a parent is dishonoured, they cannot avoid taking out of it whatever of amusement is found in the comic and ridiculous. All that is to be known by out FINANCIAL POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT.—Yesterday afternoon, a meeting was called at the Post Office Hotel, York-street, by an advertisement which requested the attendance of merchants, traders, mechanics, and shipowners interested in the prosperity of the colony, and who were opposed to the action of the present Government, at a preliminary meeting, for the purpose of initiating some active and decided movement to prevent the disaster with which the country was threatened. There were about fifteen gentlemen present, among whom were Mr. Robert Campbell, of the Commercial Wharf; Mr. Cunneen (late M.L.A.), Mr. George Oakes, of Parramatta; Mr. A. Allan, and Mr. Fyfe. Mr. George Smith was called to the chair, on the motion of Mr. Pritchard, who stated that he had called the meeting by advertisement, although he had not felt that it would have been necessary for him to have attached his name to it. Believing that some well supported movement would be necessary to save the country from the financial policy of the Government, which would, he was assured, but result in its ruin, and feeling confident that most others beside himself were of the same opinion, he had called this meeting, which he believed would have been very largely attended. When he had advertised this meeting, he did not remember that there was the Intercolonial Cricket Match to attract the people. But though the meeting was not large, he believed it was unanimous enough. A discussion ensued. Mr. Fyfe, who entirely disapproved of the financial policy of the Government, thought that Mr. Pritchard had been guilty of a great mistake in not placing his name at the foot of the advertisement. The public had no faith in anonymous advertisements, and did not respond to them. Mr. Robert Campbell did not see that there should have been a meeting here to-day. He had heard that a large meeting, which would be likely to be addressed by able speakers, would soon take place in another quarter, with a similar object in view. What reason was there if they held the opinions of this proposed monster meeting that they did not wait until they could give their co-operation to it? Mr. George Oakes, after drawing a sad picture of the state of the harbour and condition of the country that would, in his opinion, result if the financial policy of the Government were carried into effect, thought with Mr. Campbell, that there were many eminent men yet in the country who would give them their countenance in their endeavours to induce the Government to forego its policy, and considered that they might with advantage adjourn their meeting, even though it were but for the dispatch of preliminary business, until Monday next, when the intercolonial match would be over, so that they would be able to secure the attendance of the public, who, though absent, he firmly believed sympathised with the objects of the meeting. Mr. A. Allan agreed with Mr. Oakes in his suggestion for an adjournment. After some further discussion, Mr. Pritchard said that to meet the views of the meeting he would suggest that it be adjourned —probably till Monday next, and in the same place of meeting, so that they might ascertain whether the intended monster meeting held the same views concerning the financial policy of the Government as they did. If its views were the same, they could lend their co-operation. The meeting then broke up with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

PITT STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Last evening, a tea meeting, to commemorate the second anniversary of the co-pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Fullerton and the Rev. J. L. Nairn, was held in the Temperance Hall. About three hundred persons sat down to the tea tables, which were bountifully provided and presided over by ladies of the congregation. Afterwards a public meeting was held, the Rev. Mr. Nairn presiding. Devotional exercises being over, the chairman, as junior minister of the church, reported that there had been steady prosperity during the year, both with regard to the attendance and in a financial point of view, and the utmost harmony prevailed. After payment of all claims upon the sustentation fund, a balance of £37 remained. Some improvements were about to be made in the lighting of the church. The Mutual Improvement Association continued in a prosperous state; and the Bible class and Sunday school were carried on as usual with encouraging results. The Revs. Dr. Beg, Dr. M'Gibbon, C. M'Culloch, R. Lewers, R. S. Paterson, and Fitzgerald addressed the meeting during the course of the evening on various religious topics. The choir at intervals sang pieces of sacred music. A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to the ladies for presiding at the tea and to the choir for their services, on the motion of the Rev. Mr. Paterson, seconded by Mr. G. Fullerton. The meeting was closed with the Apostolic Benediction, pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Fullerton, shortly after 10 o'clock.

ACCIDENTS FROM KEROSENE.—We have seen a certificate from an analytical chemist stating that he examined a parcel of imported kerosene oil, and found its "flashing point" to be at 91 degrees F. As there have been several accidents lately from kerosene, people who use this oil for lighting should be cautious that it is up to the safe standard.

CARELESS USE OF ORANGE PEEL, FRUIT SKINS, &c.—Persons who indulge in eating fruit in the streets of the city will for the future have to take care what they do with the skins. Numerous accidents have been caused by orange peel and pieces of fruit being carelessly thrown down on the footpaths, and the Corporation, having taken the matter into their consideration, have passed a by-law, which it is hoped will put a stop to this dangerous practice. The by-law has received the assent of his Excellency the Governor, and comes into operation at once. It is as follows:—"Whereas the careless throwing or dropping of fruit or skins of fruit upon the footpaths of the city of Sydney is a nuisance, and a fraught with danger to the public, and it is necessary, for the public safety, to prevent the same: Be it hereby enacted, by the Municipal Council of the city of Sydney, in pursuance of the powers in them vested, from and after these by-laws coming into operation, no person, whose age shall exceed ten years shall throw or drop upon any footpath in the city of Sydney any fruit or fruit skin or peel; any person above the age aforesaid offending against this by-law shall, upon conviction before any one or more Justices of the Peace for the said city, forfeit and pay for their offence any sum not exceeding 40s., to be recovered in a summary way as by law provided."

MUSIC PERMISSIONS.—The following notice, signed by the Police Magistrate, is posted in the office of the Central Police Court:—"The magistrates, having a discretionary power, and not being obliged to assign any reasons for their decisions, are unanimous in their determination to refuse all music permissions; and as I decline to take the responsibility of granting them, it will be a waste of time and a waste of trouble to submit any applications for such permissions to me or any other magistrate."

THE PRINCE OF WALES OPERA HOUSE.—On Monday and Tuesday evenings Mr. and Mrs. Darrell appeared in "Camille," and attracted average houses. "Lesh" was produced on Wednesday, with an improved attendance. Mrs. Heir, who played the role of the Jewish maiden with great power, was several times called before the curtain, and in the scene with Rudolph after the marriage she was rewarded with prolonged applause, which was shared by Mr. Darrell, who played that character in a painstaking manner. Nathan, though not altogether in Mr. Douglas's line, was carefully rendered, and Lorrentz found an excellent representative in Mr. Welsh. Miss Grainger's performance of the part of Sarah was meritorious, and much superior to any other she has appeared in here. The efforts of Mr. Young, Mrs. Jones, and Miss Carey received due recognition at the hands of the audience, and the minor parts were effective. Last night it was displaced by one of the best written of modern plays. The "Lady of Lyons," with Mrs. Darrell as Pauline, Mr. Darrell as Claude, Mr. Young as Colonel Dumas, Mr. Welsh as Deschappelles, Mrs. Jones as Madame Deschappelles, Miss Morgan as Widow Melnotte, Mr. Douglas as Beausant, Mr. Anderson as Glavis, and Mr. Rainford as Gaspar. The piece went very smoothly, and elicited marks of satisfaction from the audience. The farce of "The Lottery Ticket," cast as on Monday night, concluded the entertainment. To-night the drama of the "Sea of Ice," with original effects, as first produced at the Adelphi Theatre, London, will be performed: and on Monday Byron's new comic drama, "Blow for Blow," will be played for the first time in Sydney.

THE VICTORIA THEATRE.—Hussey's Minstrels continue to attract good houses by varying their entertainments. Their programme has been judiciously altered several times during the week with success, and the troupe have no reason to ignore the plaudits which have rewarded their efforts. Mr. Hussey's comicalities are as mirth-provoking as ever, and his dances are inimitable. Miss Clifton and Mr. Ashland are stars in the vocal department, and several of the instrumentalists are very clever. To-night the performances will be under the patronage of the cricketers engaged in the intercolonial match.

RENNO AND CLINT'S PANORAMA.—The prominent incidents connected with the Franco-Prussian war, so well depicted on canvas by Mr. Clint, and rendered more effective by the mechanism of Mr. Renno, have drawn a large number of persons to the School of Arts since the exhibition opened, on last Saturday night. Those who have seen it consider it worthy of support, and the colonial views which form the second part of the entertainment are not less satisfactory. As a purely colonial production, they are deserving of patronage; and in point of real merit, they will not suffer by comparison with anything of the kind shown here.

THE Prussian Moniteur Officiel of Versailles has recently published an article noticing the proposition of M. de Gasparin, that instead of a cession of territory by the French, Alsace and Lorraine should be formed into a neutral State. This suggestion is regarded by the Moniteur as unacceptable, "experience having proved that the guaranteed neutralization of a small State is far from possessing the practical value which is expected. By forming a neutral State under their collective guarantee, the Powers seem to relieved the inhabitants of the neutralized country of the care and even the sense of their own responsibility, they may dispense, it is supposed, with that vigilance, prudence and watchfulness which are to weak guaranteed States a first law of existence. Neutralization has, therefore, become a kind of assurance against all risks, a patent of immunity." The Moniteur quotes the charges brought by Count Bismarck against Luxemburg, and concludes that the annexation of Alsace and Lorraine would not give Germany that positive security which she demands for her western frontier.

The betting was level on Nimblefoot against the field, and 5 to 1 against Tim Whiffler. From the start Nimblefoot led away steadily, closely followed by Warrior, with Foam third; at the back of the course Foam challenged Nimblefoot, but could not beat him, and so left him the lead, which he maintained to the finish. Tim showed badly from the beginning, though he pulled to fourth place. Mermaid came in second, and Foam third.

THE DANGERS OF SNUFF-TAKING.—In one of our hospital reports will be found, the Lancet states, a startling instance of the poisonous effects of lead being produced by the use of contaminated snuff. The victim, who was a resident in India, was in the habit of taking "best brown rappee," exported by a well-known and popular English firm in leaden cases. His medical advisers first attributed the failing power of his upper extremities, and other unpleasant symptoms, to the use of his favourite tobacco; but after he had been to the trouble and expense of coming to England in search of further advice, his suffering was traced to the real source. To be quite certain, six separate packages were ordered from Calcutta, and a sample from each of them was found to contain an intimate union with a considerable quantity of lead. Rappee appears to be a rather moist preparation of the refreshing weed, and, where it adhered to the sides of the leaden cases, it was in these instances found to be dotted with spots of carbonate of lead, formed, it is supposed, by a combination with the walls of the case, of carbonic acid, liberated by the fermentation of the damp snuff; it presented, in fact, a miniature example of the process by which white lead is manufactured for commercial purposes. A medical man, who has recently returned from Calcutta, states that he had lately met with three patients suffering in the same way from the same cause. They are probably not the only snuff-takers who are being poisoned with lead. Both manufacturers and consumers would do well to see to it at once that damp provisions are no longer stored in leaden cases.

VICTORIA v. NEW SOUTH WALES.

SECOND DAY.

THE progress of the match on the second day (although regarded as the intermediate stage) ought not to be the least exciting, for between intercolonial teams it usually settles the difference as to the first innings, and that is no small matter when the balance of skill is pretty even. So it happened yesterday; the beginning and the end of the first innings of New South Wales evoked exuberant feelings from the spectators, the two Gregorys (David and Edward) making an excellent opening, and Bannerman and Moore a good finish.

The weather was again in favour of the match, though not so clear as on Thursday, and the attendance of spectators, not more than seven or eight hundred at the commencement of the play, increased in the afternoon to nearly four thousand.

Punctually at noon, the not-outs of the previous day, Wills and Reid, appeared at the creases to the bowling of Faithfull and Moore. After a snick in the slips for two off Faithfull, a square leg hit for four by Wills off Moore, from whom Reid also got a hit to long leg for two, which brought up the total to 180, Coates took the bowling from Moore. For the next four overs only two singles and a bye were scored. The second of Coates's third over Wills skied between the wickets. Hewitt and Coates were ready for the chance, and either might have taken it but the ball grounded between the two. Whilst it was in mid-air Wills, as in duty bound, made a disconcerting movement by running, but he was not promptly answered by Reid, who crossed, although he did not reach his crease before the bails were displaced. Reid, who had made 4, gave the ninth wicket for 188, and was succeeded by Darke. Two more overs finished the innings, but these yielded 10 runs. Wills had Faithful to long-on for two and a single, then played Coates in the straight field for four, and to long-on for three. Darke was immediately after clean bowled by Coates for nil. Wills, not out, 39. Total of innings, 198.

The complete official score of the innings is as follows:—

With little loss of time the play was resumed by the Victorians taking the field for the first innings of New South Wales, which commenced a few minutes before 1 o'clock, by David and Edward Gregory against the bowling of Cosstick and Reid. In Cosstick's first over D. Gregory had him to long leg for four, and E. Gregory followed with a cut off Reid for a double. For three overs only a single was scored but subsequently runs came thick. Edward got Cosstick to long leg for a double and single, and his brother also played him to mid-on for one. The score being at 14, Darke took the bowling at Reid's end. His third David cut, and lifted the next to mid-on (no one there) for doubles, and in his second over cut him again for a double, and got him to long leg for four, which, with a single gained by Edward, brought up 30 on the board. Cosstick was then nicely drawn by David for two, but he followed with a dangerous lift to long-on (a chance missed by Heather) scoring a single. David made two doubles for long leg and long-on hits, in addition to a couple of units, when Edward, playing to Darke, was given out for leg before wicket. He retired for 13. First wicket for 38. For half-a-dozen overs, then Sheridan appeared at the wickets, very little trouble was given to the scorers; but Sheridan subsequently made a risky cut off Darke for two, and then played him to mid-on for three (one due to overthrow). In the same over, D. Gregory played to leg for a double. Such 'goings on" were doomed to an abrupt stoppage, for in the next over Cosstick landed the ball in Sheridan's middle and off stumps, thus limiting his score to 6. Two wickets for 47. He was succeeded by Caffyn, who at once had Cosstick to mid-on for a single, and a leg-bye for three brought the score up to the half century. In Darke's tenth over D. Gregory played him to square leg for four, then skipped Cosstick somewhat dangerously for the same number, and had Darke to long-off for a third four. A total of 66 was thus reached, and Caffyn, before anything more was added, hit rather rashly at a well-bowled shot from Reid, and found it landed in his timbers. He earned but 5, and was succeeded by Hewitt, who, commencing with cautious play, obtained a prolonged innings and secured the highest score by vigorous hitting on every favourable opportunity. In six overs he and his comrade brought the score up to 80. The bowling now for several overs became rather oppressive and admitted of little running. Gregory reopened the account in Darke's sixteenth by a snick for two, and a dangerous cut (missed by Goldsmith), for an equal number. Hewitt afterwards cut the same bowler for a double, and Gregory played him in mid-on for a single due to overthrowing, this bringing up the total to 90. Gregory then cut Cosstick for a single, and Hewitt drove him in the straight for four. The next over from Darke was fatal to Gregory, who, snicking a get-up ball from Darke, was cleverly taken at the wicket by Cooper. His fine score of 51 was due to excellent batting, and he left the total at 94 for four wickets. His brother Charles filled the vacancy, but only saw a couple of overs, in which three singles were made, when Wills took the bowling at Cosstick's end. His first Gregory cut for three, Hewitt got the second to square-leg for the same number, and the third Gregory played mid-on for a single. Next over Gregory played Darke up to long-off, and was caught easily by Goldsmith, after he had made 5. Five wickets for 104. Nat Thompson and Hewitt were now together, and after a single from Darke Hewitt got Wills to long-off for four and to cover for one. Darke's next yielded two units and a double for a square-leg lift by Hewitt, a chance missed by Heather. In the next half-dozen overs, in addition to singles, Hewitt had Wills to long-on and to long-leg for fours, and to long-off for a double; Thompson in the meantime driving Darke in long-off for fours. Hewitt's lift to long-leg looked like a chance for Goldsmith, but could not have been easy. The score was brought to 140 by two fours in the longfield off and on by Hewitt off Darke, who resumed the bowling from Wills. The change proved successful, for only nine more were added, when Thompson was caught cleverly at point by Williams off Cosstick, and he withdrew for half a dozen runs. Six wickets for 149. Bannerman (the colt of the team) then made his debut with the bat, and handled it well against perhaps the most difficult bowling of the innings. In the next four overs, in addition to singles, Hewitt had Darke to square leg for four, and Bannerman lifted him to long leg for the same score, the chance being attempted in vain by Loughman; and the score being thus increased to 159, Reid took the ball from Darke. A maiden from each end followed, and in the next from Reid in trying to play in to leg, Hewitt missed and heard a noise behind that induced him to quit. In an innings not remarkable for length so much as for steady yet spirited batting, he earned the highest score on either side, having contributed 60 to the account. Seven wickets for 160. Coster, who came in next, finished the over from Reid with a hit to mid off for a single; but on the change of over, Cosstick sent him a teaser, breaking in from the off (Coates batting left-hand), and, playing it defensively, he was caught easily by Williams at point. Eight wickets for 161. When Faithfull joined Bannerman, the bowling was more than previously severe, and for half a dozen overs only three singles were added, Faithfull then got Reid to square leg for four, but in the same over in attempting a repetition he shared the fate of Hewitt, and retired for five, giving the ninth wicket for 167. The last man, George Moore, was now in, and few expected that the veteran and the colt would add anything material to the score; but their career up to the finish was the most exciting part of the day's play. Facing the two crack bowlers of the Victorian team, who were now in fine form, they still continued to score. After obtaining a single, Moore got Reid to square leg for two, and Bannerman in the next over from Cosstick cut for four, and played him to long leg for the same figure. A double by Moore off Reid for a hit to long off, and a single by Bannerman off Cosstick, raised the total to 181, when Wills went on with slows at Reid's end. His first Bannerman got to square leg for four, and then had him to long off for one. A few more singles brought up the score to 190, at which stage Bannerman again had Wills to long off for four and a single. From Cosstick's next a unit was obtained, and Wills then changed to fast bowling. Bannerman cut him for four bringing the score up to 200, and was then bowled by Wills. Moore not out, made 8; Bannerman 32. Both were carried to the pavilion by their comrades, having, as last bats, earned 33, and this contributed largely to a majority over Victoria in the first innings.

The official analysis of bowling has not yet been made up.

The Victorians opened their second innings with Campbell and Goldsmith, to the bowling of Moore and D. Gregory. From Moore's first Campbell gave a difficult chance, well tried by Thompson from point, but a single was gained safely. Goldsmith played the fourth ball to long leg for four. In Moore's second Goldsmith cut for four more, snicked in the slips for two and then lifted to long leg for a single. Two other units having been added, making a total of 4, Hewitt went on with slows at Gregory's end. His second ball Goldsmith put to short leg, whence it was so well returned by Moore as to afford Thompson an opportunity of removing the bails before the striker had finished a second run. Goldsmith quitted for 12, giving the first wicket for 14. His place was taken by Cooper, who with Campbell made some good play for the rest of the evening. They added 19 by singles and doubles, in making which Campbell gave one chance at point. When the stumps were drawn, the score stood at 32 for one wicket.

In accordance with an old custom in the mother country, the scorers over fifty on either side are to receive from the association a guinea each, and in addition Mr. W. Curtis contributes another for David Gregory's 51. A special award (by subscription) is to be made for Hewitt's admirable catch on Thursday.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. C. COWPER, W. P. M.

YESTERDAY forenoon, a number of gentlemen met at the Water Police Office, among whom were the Hon. J. Robertson (Colonial Secretary), the Hon. George Lord (Colonial Treasurer), Mr. Saul Samuel, M.L.A., Mr. Spring, M.L.A. for Wellington; Mr. John E. Kelly, J.P. (Bourke); Mr. Harris Cohen, J.P. (Brewarrina); Mr. J. E. Serisier, J.P. (Dubbo); Major Raymond, Captain Chatfield, Mr. T. Hill, J.P., and Messrs. Bridge and Gedye.

Mr. LORD—the party having adjourned to the Water Police Magistrate's private room, where the articles forming the testimonial were displayed—read the following address from the residents of Gongolgon and Brewarrina:—

"To Charles Cowper, Esq., Jun., P.M.

"DEAR SIR,—We, the inhabitants of Brewarrina and Gongolgon, take this opportunity of expressing to you our sense of the loss we have sustained through your removal from our district.

"We would, at the same time, express the pleasure it gives us to know that the admirable qualities you have displayed in the discharge of your duties as Police Magistrate when resident among us, have been so acknowledged as to secure to you an appointment of a much higher and more lucrative nature. We are, therefore, consoled by the reflection that our loss has been your gain.

"The discharge of your difficult duties, while amongst us, could not fail to give satisfaction, as you proved yourself zealous, honest, and upright, as a private individual always evincing an interest in all matters tending to our prosperity, so that it will not be found easy to fill the vacancy caused by your departure.

"We pray that every prosperity may attend you in your course through life, and that in your private relationships, you may experience true happiness, and in your public career, honour and prosperity."

Here come the signatures of John M'Nevin, J.P., Richard J. Kelly, Alfred Brooke, J.P., Walter Douglass, J.P., Thomas M'Nevin, J.P., Harris Cohen, J.P., James Govan, J.P., and twenty-four other gentlemen.

Mr. COWPER read the following reply:—"Gentlemen,—I receive with great pleasure your very complimentary address on my removal from the office of police magistrate of your district, and your kind congratulations on my promotion to that of Water Police Magistrate in this city. I assure you that, however satisfactory to myself and well-wishers that promotion may be, I shall always regret parting with the numerous kind and warm friends by whom I was surrounded while residing amongst you. You speak with approbation of my services as a public officer, but I cannot hide from myself that my task was rendered comparatively easy by the high character of the people of the districts generally, and by the cordial aid which I received from my brother magistrates. I accept with warm thanks the elegant and substantial mark of your kindly feeling which accompanies the address. This memento of your appreciation of my public services, and of your personal regard, is not only highly valued by me, but will be equally prized by my children. Wishing you and all dependant on you every happiness and prosperity, I am, gentlemen, your faithful servant."

Mr. COWPER said further that he felt much gratified by observing that his humble services had been so highly appreciated by the people of Brewarrina during his short residence among them as a police magistrate. People thought, on his first going there, that he would take sides with certain people in politics; but on his taking the post of magistrate at Brewarrina he threw aside all connection with politics. It had further been believed that his former political life would have so influenced him, that he would continue to dabble in politics at Brewarrina. Many of those who had been instrumental in getting up this presentation differed from him in their political leanings; and foremost among them he might mention the name of Mr. Harris Cohen. While at Brewarrina he had always endeavoured to keep the people from quarrelling, and to band them together in unity. The duties of police magistrate at the township of Brewarrina would be satisfactorily performed by his successor, than whom he did not think there was any gentleman better qualified.

The testimonial to Mr. Cowper consists of a very neatly designed and massive silver luncheon tray, with two cut glass decanters and a biscuit glass, with a silver cover tastefully engraved, on which is the following inscription:—"Presented to Charles Cowper, Esq., junior, late Police Magistrate at Brewarrina, on his leaving the district to accept the appointment of Water Police Magistrate in Sydney, 1871." Two side dishes, with covers, and a neat octagon clock in glass case with crystal sides, which allow a view of the works, and a pretty mercurial pendulum. A plate on the time-piece bears an inscription similar to that on the top of the biscuit glass.

INTERCOLONIAL NEWS.

QUEENSLAND.

OUR files from Brisbane are to the 7th instant.

Ministers of the Crown (says the Courier), both in the Imperial and colonial Parliaments, have long been celebrated for their wonderful knack of so framing answers to troublesome or impertinent questions as to convey little or no information, while, at the same time, the answers are courteous and dignified in the highest degree. It takes some study to attain anything like perfection in the art, and some Ministers never do acquire it thoroughly, whilst others become so proficient that they can practise it under all circumstances. We never gave Mr. Palmer credit for possessing this art, and are not prepared to do so even now; but if he was the most astute and accomplished of diplomatists, he could not have succeeded better than he (or the officers of his department) has done in a return just to hand. It is headed "Immigration and Emigration of South Sea Islanders," and was made on the motion of Mr. Jordan. Information was sought on the following points:—"1. What ships have come with islanders since August, 1869? 2. To whom the islanders and ships were consigned? 3. Number of islanders? 4. What islands they came from? 5. The number of islanders returned home since August, 1869? 6. When, how, and where they were sent, and in whose charge?" And the following answers have been returned:—"1. Lyttona, Woodlark, Jacon (Jason?), Spunkie, Marion Renny, and Amy Robsart. 2. Fenwick and Co., Travis and Co., J. C. Wilkins, Brabant and Co., and G. Anderson. 3. 681. 4. Sandwich, Apia, Tanna, Valua, Gana, Fortuna, Erromango, Mta, Tonga, Tasco, Motta, Matloff, Santo, and Ambrym. 5. 722. 6. From 9th October, 1869, to 5th December, 1870. By the ships Lyttona, Spunkie, Woodlark, Mystery, Amy Robsart, Mary Campbell, Jacon, and Harriet King. To the islands of Lifu, Mare, Sandwich, Tanna, Mallicolla, Fortuna, Amata, Lava, Apia, Matloff, Erromango, Tonga, Tasco, Alopa, Rotumah, Mai, Ambrym, Mou, and Ambini. In charge of John Smith, W. Livingstone, A. Macgregor, J. W. Coath, James L. A. Hope, George Smith, Henry Russell, Joseph Irving, James Aitken, W. J. Farquhar, W. Spence, and John Rees." If Mr. Jordan can extract any specific information from this he is clever.

The same journal states that another batch of South Sea Islanders, who have performed their three years' engagements in Queensland, are about to return to their native isles, and they appear to be making every effort to astonish their uncivilised brethren when they get home. During the past few days they have been busy making purchases of all kinds—boxes, clothing, firearms, and ironmongery forming the greater part of their stock; and as a rule they display very good judgment and tact in their bargaining. They are exceedingly jolly and healthy, and appear much improved by their sojourn amongst civilised people. Some of them have become so fastidious in the matter of dress that they turn up their noses at "slop" goods, and are getting their coats, vests, and pants made to measure by the most fashionable tailor they can discover.

The Rockhampton Bulletin of March 4 states that the schooner Rose arrived in the river a few days ago from Thirsty Sound. She has on board thirty-five tons ore from "Stanges Bay Copper Mine," Torrilla. The master of the vessel reports that there is a great mass of ore resembling a cliff, close to the sea. It is close to the mouth of Thirsty Sound, and just two miles from Pier Head, which is on an island lying north-west from the point of Cape Palmerston. Stanges Bay is much exposed to northerly winds, and subject to great rise and fall of tides. It is therefore rather dangerous for shipping, and already a breakwater is talked of should the mine go a-head, as its owners anticipate. The Rose's cargo in the first shipment of ore from the new mine; and it is to be forwarded to the Newcastle Smelting Works for assay. As we have already stated, there is considerable doubt whether the ore is cupriferous or not. Some of it undoubtedly is, but a large proportion is believed to contain some other metal. We shall wait the assay report with much interest, as, in the event of expectations being realised, Stanges Bay will soon become as celebrated as the Peak Downs and Burra Burra. Whatever the ore may be composed of, there is perfect unanimity in the reports of all visitors as to the enormous quantity procurable at the new mine, at a very trifling cost.

A man named Robert Fleming (says the Port Denison Times) died recently on Goganga Creek. He was endeavouring to make his way from Ravenswood to Mackay, and had got as far as Mr. Bode's station at Gogangra. Cassidy, a stockman, seeing that the man looked ill, invited him to stop at the hut for a few days. The man accepted the invitation and remained a short time, after which he resumed his journey. A day or two afterwards Cassidy found him on Goganga Creek, wandering about and stark mad. Cassidy did what he could for him, but he died shortly afterwards.

The Mint receipts and issues during the week ending to-day were:—Gold received for coinage, 26,225 oz.; coin issued, 57,000 sovereigns.

The Sobraon has cleared for London with 5027 bales wool, 184 bales cotton, 912 casks tallow, 529 cases preserved meat, 118 casks treacle, 3094 ingots 1048 cakes copper.

Transactions in the Stock and Share market since date of last report have been of a trivial character, owing to the high prices asked by holders of stocks most in demand. Bank shares, with the exception of City, were in good request, and prices firmer; Commercial have advanced to 56, with few offering. Sellers of New South Wales still decline to quit at buyers' rates, and Joint Stock are firm at 84; Australasian Steam are offering more freely, 13 being the selling price. General and Sydney Fire are the only insurance shares in favour with investors, the former closing at 14, and the latter at 28. Peak Downs Copper were in less demand, quotations unchanged. A large parcel of Gas-light shares offered on Thursday for positive sale by auction realised high rates, and gave an average of £12 14s. 8d.; brokers report business at £12 15s. to £12 16s. 6d. Government debentures were very scarce, and New South Wales terminables sold at 10s. premium. City of Sydney, due 1878, and Sydney Exchange Company 6 per cents, due 1876, were placed at par.

SQUEEZABLE CANDIDATES.

(From the Saturday Review.)

Some of the Ministerial papers have made haste to rejoice over the Newport election, as breaking the "spell of defeat" against which candidates of their party have of late been vainly struggling. Prudence might have counselled waiting till the filling up of the next vacancy before indulging in too confident congratulations on a change of fortune, and it is possible, without resorting to any theory of the evil eye, to conceive substantial and not very obscure reasons why the followers of the Government should not enjoy a large share of popular favour at the present moment. In itself a vote more or less in Mr. Gladstone's majority is a trivial matter. As far as mere numbers go, that majority is still practically sufficient to secure to its leader the command of the House of Commons. But Mr. Gladstone has himself warned us, with characteristic solemnity, that votes must be weighed as well as counted; and from this point of view it is impossible to resist some serious misgivings as to the tendency of the last and other recent elections. Candidates are now habitually subjected to a process of squeezing, by organised agitators, which they have not, apparently, the strength of mind to resist, and which cannot fail to produce a most degrading and disastrous effect on the assembly which is composed of elements thus chosen and manipulated. A great deal of ingenious legislation has been contrived for the purpose of preventing bribery and corruption, and in their grosser forms these offences have probably been checked. Unfortunately, there are other forms of corruption, less palpable but more mischievous, which legislation cannot reach. A doctor has often to be on his guard against driving a disease merely out of sight, at the risk of transferring it from some spot where it is offensively conspicuous but does no deep-seated harm, to some other part where, though less apparent, its insidious ravages are far more deadly in their effect. Of course it is very shocking that men should sell their votes for a few shillings or a few pounds, for a gallon of cheap ale or a heavy dose of rum. But, after all, there is something even worse than constituents selling themselves to candidates, and that is, candidates selling themselves to constituents. It has never been shown that the acceptance of a bribe by a voter implies a criminal disposition which seeks vent in other ways; a man may take a bribe without being any nearer picking a pocket or forging a cheque. An imperfect moral sense on this point is quite compatible with undoubted honesty in other maters. Whatever demoralization a voter undergoes by disposing of his vote for money or money's worth is insignificant compared with the demoralization of a candidate who consents not merely to hide or disguise, but publicly to repudiate and renounce, his own convictions. It is to the spread of this kind of corruption that the conditions under which elections are now conducted appear to us to tend. A knot of energetic fanatical persons take up some question in which they are interested—the prohibition of the liquor trade, the abolition of the Contagious Diseases Acts, or something of the kind—and persecute candidates into giving them a pledge of support. The candidate is sure to be told by his agent that the annoyance and vexation which these people have it in their power to cause are incalculable. Whatever he says or does, short of an unqualified surrender to their behests, is certain to be misrepresented in the most cruel and persistent manner. Garbled extracts from his speeches, bitter personal attacks, will be placarded on all the walls, and introduced at every meeting. The Contagious Diseases question has especial terrors for most candidates, since it is one from the public discussion of which the mind naturally revolts, especially a discussion conducted with the obscene frankness in which many of the opponents of the Acts delight to luxuriate. The consequence probably is, that the candidate begins by trying to palter with the question, gives a half-and-half promise to do what is wanted on certain conditions, and is finally driven into an absolute engagement without any conditions at all. The Newport election illustrates this state of things in so striking a manner that it is worth while to study it in detail.

The two candidates at Newport were Mr. Charles Clifford (Liberal) and Mr. H. Martyn Kennard (Conservative). We do not know what authority the organ of the National Association for the Repeal of the Contagious Diseases Acts has for its assertion that Mr. Clifford "was well known to be in favour of the Acts." The statement is oddly coupled with an incidental remark that his father is Usher of the Black Rod, and that he himself was Secretary to Lord Palmerston. The view of the obnoxious Acts attributed to Mr. Clifford is perhaps supposed by the editor to be a logical and inevitable deduction from such personal antecedents. However that may be, it is clear that Mr. Clifford at the outset was disposed to think there was something to be said for the Acts, and was not at any rate prepared, on the eve of a searching and authoritative inquiry into their operation, to condemn them utterly before hearing the evidence on the subject. This was Mr. Clifford's first reply to the agent of the association:—

"Newport, Isle of Wight, November 11, 1870.

"My opinion respecting the Contagious Diseases Act is, that pending the inquiry which the Government have promised to institute, it would be premature on my part to give a pledge, either one way or the other. I am, however, prepared to promise that should the majority of my constituents wish for the total repeal of the Act, I will vote for the same.

"I am decidedly of opinion that the Act in many of its details is very objectionable.

"Charles C. Clifford."

When Mr. Clifford wrote this letter he was of course aware of the nature of the opposition he had to expect from the Association, and was naturally anxious to conciliate them as far as possible. We may fairly assume that if he had been, on conviction, hostile to the Acts, he would have hastened to say so, and that, as he did not say so, he in some degree approved them. Mr. Clifford was in the position of a man seeking to be elected to serve on a jury, and he was asked to pledge himself beforehand that no matter what evidence might be forthcoming, no matter what unexpected disclosures or what overwhelming weight of testimony, he would shut his eyes and ears to all of it, and return a verdict of wholesale and unqualified condemnation, in accordance with the preconceived judgment of his bigoted and fanatical mentors. To such a demand, Mr. Clifford's reply was as moderate and conciliatory as could well be made. Even if he had been at the time actually opposed, instead of favourable, to the Acts, he could not be expected to promise unceasing hostility to a system of the utility of which he might possibly be persuaded afterwards on the strength of information not now attainable. At the utmost, he could only undertake to judge the question by the report of the commission, and, if he found the conclusion at which he arrived different from that of the majority of his constituents, to vote against the Acts simply as their delegate, without reference to his own opinion. Most people will be disposed to think that this was, to say the least, fully as much as could be required with reason on the one side or granted with self-respect on the other. Those who know anything of the temper and tactics of the association will not, however, be surprised to learn that Mr. Clifford's letter was considered by them as, "of course, not at all satisfactory." The result of a similar application to Mr. Kennard, the Conservative candidate, was more to their taste. His reply, which is pronounced to be "comparatively satisfactory," ran thus:—

"Buge's Hotel, Newport.

"Sir,—Since our interview of this morning on the subject of the Contagious Diseases Acts, I have had an opportunity of making myself acquainted with the operation of those Acts, and of learning the views of the majority of the electors of the borough, and I have, therefore, no hesitation in saying that I have determined to give those Acts, as at present constituted, my most unqualified opposition.

"The Acts are not at present in operation in this town, but as I have reason to believe that Newport is named as one of those towns intended to be immediately included under the Acts, I feel it is quite time for me to express thus clearly my views on the subject.

"I remain, yours faithfully,

"H. Martyn Kennard.

"November 10, 1870."

This ready acquiescence in the extreme views of the association is just what might be expected from so remarkable a proficient in rapid processes of thought. Mr. Kennard's mind works at the pace of what the Americans call "greased lightning." One forenoon the question of the Contagious Diseases Acts, of which apparently he had never heard before, is introduced to his notice. After listening politely to an harangue from the agent of the association and to another from a Wesleyan minister, he remarked, with diplomatic caution, that "if one-tenth part of what was said against the Acts were true, he would oppose them with all his might." Mr. Kennard does not seem to have been informed, nor to have discovered for himself in the course of the researches which he immediately commenced, that this was just the question at issue—whether one-tenth part, or one-twentieth, or any infinitesimal fraction, of what was said against the Acts was true, and that a Royal Commission, composed of men of unimpeachable integrity, was about to investigate the subject, with every means at their command for ascertaining the truth. An hour or two sufficed to enable Mr. Kennard not only to make himself acquainted with the operation of the Acts, but to take the opinion of the majority of the electors of the borough on the subject. This, in addition to reading all the official reports, controversial correspondence, Parliamentary and other speeches on the question, must be pronounced one of the most rapid acts of political inquiry on record. We are afraid the Royal Commission will hardly get through its task at the same speed, though, if candidates follow the example set at Newport, the commissioners will find it hardly worth while to go through the farce of collecting information which members of the House of Commons have pledged themselves on no account to take into consideration. That such a reply as Mr. Kennard's should be regarded by the association as only "comparatively satisfactory," would appear to argue a very carping and ungrateful temper on their part. Nothing could well be more absolute and abject than the poor man's surrender, but perhaps their qualified satisfaction arose from the obvious hollowness of an opinion arrived at in such a manner. Besides issuing a placard—"Electors of Newport, be upon your guard"—which, though nominally addressed to the electors, was really a warning to the candidates, the agent of the association forwarded Mr. Kennard's letter to Mr. Clifford's committee. This was as much as to say, "Now you see what the Conservative says; how much farther will your man go?" In consequence of this, "great pressure," we are told, was applied to Mr. Clifford; but he appears still to have held out and refused to go beyond his letter of the 11th. The victim was now fairly on the rack, and it was thought that another twist of the screw would wring from his obdurate lips the desired confession of faith. To supplement the effect of the placards in the streets, the "pressure" in the committee-room, and the demonstrative overtures to the rival candidate, a parade was made of getting up a public meeting to denounce the Acts. This settled the business. From Mr. Kennard the following "gratifying reply" was received:—

"Dear Sir,—In reply to yours of the 11th instant, on the subject of the Contagious Diseases Acts, I have both written and stated that I have determined to give them my most unqualified opposition. I can therefore have no objection to say, that I fully intend, if elected, to vote for their immediate repeal."

This "sensible and dutiful deference to public feeling" on Mr. Kennard's part rendered his return, in the agent's opinion, tolerably certain; and as a vote against the Acts would thus be secured, it did not matter from which side of the House it came. That Mr. Clifford got another chance was not exactly due to affection, either for himself or the Liberal party, but to a feeling which is thus described, and which we leave our readers to characterise:—

"Mr. Clifford is, we believe, a son of the Usher of the Black Rod, had been Lord Palmerston's private secretary, and was well known to be in favour of the Acts. To compel him, therefore, to throw aside his personal or private crotchets on this point was not only necessary, but would be another means of putting pressure on the Government."

As a mere matter of business, no doubt, Mr. Kennard's vote would have answered the purpose of the association, but they desired a still more exquisite gratification. It was not enough to subdue a candidate who had dared to doubt whether the Acts were altogether the abomination they had been called; he must be punished by a public humiliation of the most cruel and degrading kind. He must be forced to abjure opinions which, as the organ of the association says, it is "well known" he entertains. The ecstacy with which the inquisitor at the side of the rack watches the blanched cheek and yielding spirit of the victim is enhanced by the knowledge that the recantation about to be wrung from him has nothing of honest conversion about it, and is altogether contrary to the poor wretch's own convictions. At length Mr. Clifford gave way, and issued the following letter:—

"Contagious Diseases Acts."

"To the Electors of Newport.—Gentlemen,—In deference to the very strong feeling expressed by the inhabitants of Newport, I will vote for the repeal of the Contagious Diseases Acts.—Yours obediently,—Charles C. Clifford. Newport, November 12th, 1870."

Whether the Contagious Diseases Acts are good or bad has, of course, nothing to do with the opinion which must be formed of practices like these, and of their effect on the constitution and character of the House of Commons. Neither is it a question of the right of this or any similar Association to subordinate all other questions, no matter how vital and momentous to their own particular crotchet, and even to return to Parliament a man whose general body of opinions they utterly condemn, if only he is "sound" on this single point. Undoubtedly they have the right to take this course if they choose, and there is nothing to prevent them. They are monomaniacs with whom it is hopeless to reason. The real culprits are, on the one hand, the candidates who weakly compromise their conscience and self-respect by yielding to the pressure put upon them and renouncing their own convictions; and, on the other hand, the mass of electors who through laziness and indifference allow fanatical minorities to exercise a usurped and mischievous authority. It is, as Mr. Mill has remarked, one of the most sacred duties of a public man not to desert the cause which has popular clamour against it, or deprive of his services those of his opinions which need them most. On the other hand, the candidate has a right to expect assistance and protection from the moderate and reasonable portion of the electors. The experience of the last few years shows that various questions get dangerously advanced by this kind of aggressive agitation on the one side, and softness on the other. It cannot but be disastrous, both for the Legislature and for the country, that members should be placed in the alternative of violating the pledges they have given to their constituents, or voting against their own consciences.

HONOUR AMONG NATIONS.

(From the Pall Mall Gazette.)

The immediate adoption of the Gortschakoff precedent by Count Bismark may well create doubts of the soundness of Mr. Mill's speculations on the obligatory force of treaties. The Luxemburg Convention has not a single one of the inherent vices which Mr. Mill condemned in the class of engagements to which the Treaty of Paris belonged. It inflicted no dishonour on Luxemburg, but, on the other hand, is dearly prized by the inhabitants. It would not have been one whit the more binding if it had been terminable. The arrangements which it establishes bear a very strong resemblance to the policy which Mr. Mill almost imputed it as a crime to the English Government that it had omitted to adopt—the policy of telling France and Germany that the first of them which went to war should have England for an enemy. The causes of its violation are patent to all the world. It is known that Luxemburg cannot fight, and it is believed that England will not fight. And no doubt the temptation to sacrifice good faith to an immediate advantage has been all the greater because the English statesman who negotiated the Convention declared shortly afterwards that no one of the contracting parties was bound to vindicate the neutrality guaranteed to Luxemburg unless all the contracting parties joined in vindicating it.

It is reasonable to suppose that there is some flaw in the basis of Mr. Mill's speculations, and in point of fact we think he has been misled by a false analogy. Nobody knows better than he that international law is not really law, and why it is not law; but he seems to have jumped to the conclusion that it is, therefore, the same thing as morality. It is very wrong, he wrote, to break a promise, but it does not follow that you are bound to shed the offender's blood. We are sorry to say that there is too much reason for thinking that, unless the breaking of promises is to become habitual, blood must be shed. There cannot, in truth, be any closer analogy than that which we drew the other day between the law of nations and the law of honour, and between public war and private duelling. It would be a great mistake we repeat, to take for granted that there was anything essentially immoral in the Code of Honour. To a very great extent it coincided with morality, and it even went beyond it. Thou shalt not lie; thou shalt not cheat; thou shalt keep thy promises; thou shalt not seduce women; thou shalt abstain from personal violence; thou shalt keep a civil tongue in thine head: such were its commandments. But it differed from simple morality in that its precepts were enforced, not by general disapprobation, but by a challenge to the offender from anybody who supposed himself to be aggrieved by the offence. The possible result always was that the champion of the law might himself be shot, and this was the weakness of the system. But this is exactly the weakness of international law, and the original idea at the basis both of public war and of private duelling was precisely the same—that God Almighty somehow interfered in favour of the combatant who had the juster cause. There is clear historical evidence that the feuds which became duels were supposed to be fought out under divine supervision, just as the battles were believed to be decided by the God of Battles. As this phase of thought passed away, many incidents of the system became shocking to one (though to only one) civilized society. The uncertainty of the issue, the want of any proportion between the possible punishment and the offence, the advantage given to a few form of manual skill, the exaggerated susceptibility to affront which was produced in some persons—all these combined gradually to create a feeling against duels which finally put them down; but it is still a question, though only a speculative question, whether, if the assumption of the apologist of duelling had been correct, and if the sole security for the maintenance of the precepts held binding on honourable men had really been the liability to a challenge, the suppression of duelling would have been a social or moral advantage. All the objections to duelling apply with tenfold strength to wars; and yet it is a question, not speculative but practical, whether if the fear of being attacked by any one great nation is the greatest of securities for the observation of the law of nations, the ostentatious avoidance of war by such a nation is an international gain or an international calamity.

The obvious view of Lord Palmerston was that England ought to show herself the Lord Camelford of nations, and to be ready to fight on pretexts which might almost seem trivial. Lord Palmerston's view was really that which nearly all English statesmen had taken since the Revolution of 1688; and much of the present unpopularity of our country in Europe is attributable to the suddenness with which other communities have become alive to a change of English opinion and practice which has made its way with slow steps among ourselves. The opposite doctrine to Lord Palmerston's—which has never been avowed by Mr. Gladstone, which has been expressly disclaimed by Mr. Mill, and which has been by possibility wrongly attributed to Mr. Bright—is that of "peace at any price." English policy is at present remote from either pole of opinion, but recent events make it extremely disputable whether there has not been too great a departure from that excess of susceptibility which Lord Palmerston thought essential to national dignity. Lord Camelford seemed to some persons a mere violent bully, but there were others who thought him the bulwark of the rules of honour. A man, on the other hand, who in that day acted on the opposite principle, and declined all challenges, might have been admitted among a certain number of persons who were then called Methodists; but he laid himself open to continual insults, and to many who would not themselves have committed any outrage on him he seemed to be helping to bring about a general relaxation of the bonds of social forbearance and decorum. The event, it is true, showed the opponents of duelling to be in the right. They did not put it down by themselves. It was the law which suppressed it, chiefly through the fortunate fiction which enabled it to treat the seconds as principals in the commission of the offence. But now that the system has died out, we find that we can do without it. The law punishes some offences against which men were thought to be exclusively protected by the rules of honour and the practice under them. The moral opinion of society discourages other offences, not always quite effectively, but still with substantial adequacy. But what shadow of hope is there that the society of nations will be able to do without the protection of which the counterpart has been dispensed with by English civil society? In international affairs there is no tribunal, no cognizance of accusations, no penalties graduated to offences, no officer of the law. There is, moreover, the feeblest moral opinion to serve as a substitute for obligatory legal rule. There is no doubt such a thing as international opinion, but it does not act on the commonwealth of nations as moral judgments act upon societies of men. If the opinion of the particular community happens to be at variance with that of other nations, it entirely neutralises their disapprobation; and what the rest of the world holds to be morally wrong, the offending community holds to be morally right. Under the system of duelling a man who frequented society in which adultery was held to be venial, and was rich enough to care nothing for the action of crim. con., would have been perfectly unassailable but for the challenge of the injured husband; and it was the fear of wholesale defiances of the moral code which to a great extent excused susceptibility on the point of honour. Nothing, however, is commoner than for nations to be carried away by currents of feeling which blunt for the time their sense of international morality; and, if so, what is to keep them in order or to save the principles which they disregard, except willingness and even readiness to call them out to the great duel of war? We have at most dim glimpses of a better state of things. An international tribunal, with the strong arm of the bulk of the civilised world to enforce its decrees, is certainly conceivable. But, at first, its power would be the creation of treaties, and could only be exercised through their obligatory force: whereas the most striking phenomenon of the day is admitted by disputants on all sides of this question to be shameful disregard of the obligations of public faith.

GERMAN ILL-WILL AGAINST ENGLAND.

(From the Saturday Review.)

The amiable intention of invading England, attributed by an intelligent newspaper correspondent to the German officers and soldiers, is perhaps only one of the brutalising results of war. A man who has for some time necessarily disregarded his own life and the lives of others seems to become liable to a condition of general ferocity in which he scarcely distinguishes harmless strangers from enemies, or just causes of offence from the most indifferent and legitimate actions. The Germans, who entered on the war on the most righteous grounds, have lately cultivated a feeling of moral indignation against the French, not for wanting to take the Rhine, but for resisting invasion on the Seine, and on the Loire. Any animosity which they have to spare finds vent in unprovoked vituperation of England, and, as it seems, in blustering menaces which, independently of their utter injustice, are unworthy of soldiers fresh from the achievement of unprecedented exploits. There is happily no reason to fear an invasion of England by a Power which, even if it had a legitimate cause of quarrel, cannot even now venture to send a cruiser to sea. It is unfortunately true that the army which has overrun half France might easily crush any military force now existing in England; but even German energy would fail to maintain a line of maritime communication while an enemy commanded the sea. It was not without reason that thoughtful Englishmen watched with complacency the rise of Germany to the first rank on the Continent. There was no reason to anticipate the ill-will which has arisen against England; but even if German hostility could have been foreseen, it involved no great or immediate danger. Notwithstanding a nominal state of war with Austria in the days of Frederick the Great, and with Prussia in the interval between Austerlitz and Jena, England has never engaged in serious hostilities with any German State. There can be no better proof that there is neither a collision of interests nor a facility for warlike operations which is likely to give the bellicose Prussians an opportunity of exacting requisitions in Manchester and Liverpool; yet it is a cause for deep regret that the most powerful and enlightened nation of Continental Europe should, either through ignorance or by intention, cultivate an unfriendly feeling to England.

The German people and army, in the irritable state produced by extraordinary exertion and suffering, readily adopt any charge which may be urged against a neighbour who contumeliously continues to enjoy prosperity and peace. If the Government had suggested to the nation that Russia, Austria, or Italy had given cause of complaint the official denunciation would have been universally echoed in speech and in writing. The reasons which induced Count Bismark to select England as the object of popular enmity have not been disclosed; but it may be assumed that he is influenced by some political motive rather than by error or passion. In a late communication he is said to have thanked the Belgian Government for its scrupulous neutrality as contrasted with the alleged bad faith of England. Count Bernstoff's reclamations, though they were conclusively answered, have never been withdrawn. The deliberate avoidance of all complaint against the conduct of the United States proves that the alleged grounds of dissatisfaction with England are not the true causes of German hostility. The English Government, if it had possessed surplus arms, would certainly not have placed its arsenals at the disposal of either belligerent. The President, on the contrary, publishes, in the Report of the Ordnance Department, the statement that 350,000 rifles belonging to the Government have recently been sold; nor was it necessary to name the customer. Private American traders have not been less active than the Government in supplying the wants of France. Thousands upon thousands of cases of muskets and cartridges have been shipped to "Cowes, and a market," which is well known to be a conventional designation of Havre. When the vessels laden with arms leave the American ports they are constantly saluted with cheers by crowds which openly sympathise with the cause of France; yet the authorities at Versailles are on the most friendly terms with the United States; and the North-German Consul at New York has been expressly ordered to discontinue his remonstrances against the shipment of arms. In addition to nearly 400,000 muskets and vast quantities of ammunition, 55 cannon and 5 Gatling batteries or mitrailleurs had been dispatched from American ports to France before the middle of November. It is not likely that M. Gambetta has since allowed the trade to slacken while his raw levies are assembling from all parts of France not yet occupied by the enemy.

The deliberate and artificial resentment of Germany throws some light on the more plausible complaints of the people of the United States. Americans, and Englishmen devoted to America, are in the habit of asserting that the national hatred felt against England was to a great extent caused by the preference which was exhibited in many quarters for the Confederate cause. The explanation is plausible, though insufficient; but now it is found that the most cordial recognition of the justice of the German cause, and the universal wish for its success, has no effect whatever in conciliating Germany. Grumblers even contend that neutrality in a rightful cause is necessarily a wrong. It is asserted that the war might have been prevented if England had declared her intention of taking part against the aggressor; and though it is impossible to prove a conjectural and improbable statement, the supposed inconsistency of English opinion with the policy of the Government has been represented as a grievance, not only in popular declamation, but in official documents. Count Bernstoff's theory of benevolent neutrality, whatever may have been its intrinsic value, necessarily admitted the benevolence with which the Americans allege that they would in their own case have been contented. Twenty years ago, Mr. Cobden would have explained the unmerited odium incurred by England as a neutral during two successive wars by his whimsical doctrine that no other country was so warlike, so aggressive, and so prone to interference; but though Mr. Cobden, as one of his eulogists lately boasted, was incapable of retracting an opinion; even his disciples must allow that readiness to engage in foreign quarrels is not in the present day the characteristic vice of England. No other country abstains so systematically, not merely from molesting its neighbours, but from wishing to gain advantage at their expense; yet the French consider Englishmen as little better than Prussian spies; the Germans threaten vengeance for an interpretation of neutrality which they have uniformly adopted themselves, and which they accept as sound in the case of America. In the same manner the Federal Americans abused England for favouring the South, while the Confederates never forgave the disproof of their confident assertion that Cotton was King.

The hatred of America to England, which existed in full force before the Alabama was launched, and before the Proclamation of Neutrality was issued, is largely to be attributed to tradition and to historical ignorance arising from a perverse education; but the Germans, who have no hereditary antipathy to England, are now as unjust and as exacting as if they had read the school-histories of New England. There can be little doubt that the unfriendly feeling in one case, and the habitual expression of hostility in both, arises from the belief that the power of England is no longer formidable. The antipathy with which many generations of Frenchmen will regard Germany will be the consequence of injuries suffered, and it will be more bitter in proportion to the dread which may be inspired by the organization and resources of the enemy; but where no provocation has been offered, real or supposed weakness generally supplies the explanation of insolence. The English army is in proportion to its strength five or six times as costly as the Prussian; and yet, although the total outlay is perhaps greater in England, the comparative strength of the army is already insignificant. The Germans have no objection to the export of arms from the United States to France, because America is far away, and, with all that belongs to it, wholly out of reach of German resentment. England is near, and, as her enemies believe, vulnerable, and in the present temper of the Government, and perhaps of the nation, thoroughly unwarlike. It is not only in his exemption from actual attack, but in the security which he enjoys against ill-natured language on the part of his neighbours, that a strong man armed may be said to enjoy the enviable privilege of keeping his house in peace. For his own comfort he had much better be quarrelsome than have the reputation of being afraid of a quarrel. The dullest German private would not believe or affect to believe that all American rifles were made in England if he were convinced that an honest neutral might, for sufficient cause, become a formidable enemy. A State will have no friends as long as a doubt exists whether its friendship is worth having.

MATERIALISTIC PHYSIOLOGY OF DR. BIRD

(From the Saturday Review).

In his recent volume of reprints from Indian medical journals Dr. Robert Bird shows himself an ardent and painstaking physiologist of an ultra-materialistic type. If he has not actually sat at the feet of Lawrence, he has imbibed much of the spirit of that great surgeon, and is at all times glad to lean on his authority. Whatever alarm doctrines of this strongly marked type may have aroused in the public mind a generation or two ago, we have grown too much accustomed to them now-a-days to dread the submergence of all that is spiritual, ideal, or æsthetic, not to say religious, in philosophy or faith, in a flood of materialistic physiology. After Condillac and Combe and Draper, we can still point to landmarks standing above the flood; and we can estimate at their true value such pearls as the most daring explorer has to bring up from the depths of the ocean of fact, while reserving our own view as to their due and proper setting in the chaplet of truth. Together with much careful reading Dr. Bird has brought together many results of personal study and observation, which have a value in themselves, however they seem to be narrowed in their application, or to suffer from the want of adequate correlation with phenomena of no less truth and weight in the economy of life. In his paper on "Differences in Men," Dr. Bird begins with a protest against the vulgarly received view of man as consisting of two parts. Man is composed, people commonly believe, of a "framework of certain tissues in which certain fluids are contained, and of a certain unknown essence which we name mind." It is further admitted, though Dr. Bird can hardly think it is commonly believed, that what man is pleased to call his mind can act independently of matter. We have now changed all that. "Investigating the matter as human and reasonable beings, and by the aid of science, we are unable"—at least Dr. Bird is unable—"to discover any sure grounds," or, he would rather say, "any grounds, on which to rest this opinion." Even if Gall and his followers have failed to show whereabouts in the brain each of the several mental faculties resides, still physiologists of Dr. Bird's school believe that "each immaterial faculty has its own material habitat or organ, well defined by nature, if not yet discovered by man, and that differences in the manifestations of the mental faculties depend on or arise from differences in the size or in the quality of these organs or habitats." This theory explains, we are assured, many of those problems and apparent inconsistencies in nature which disturbed and distracted the philosophers of antiquity; and, further, "it is in strict accordance with the moral constitution of man, as has been shown so ably and piously by Mr. George Combe." By a simple reference to this theory not only is the wisdom of the philosophers of antiquity reduced to folly, but an end is put to the functions and labours of moralists, metaphysicians, and divines for all time. "We at once understand why one man is more proud, more ambitious, more avaricious, and so on, than another, and why the virtues of a good man should, by contact with physical suffering, degenerate into the rank vices of a bad man." In the millennial age of universal physiology, which Dr. Bird with prophetic vision sees approaching, we shall be able, he is convinced, "with visible and tangible apparatus to gauge man with as much ease as we now gauge planets, and to predict his behaviour with as much certainty as we now foretell the advent of eclipses and the movement of the planets. It may be, he allows, a long time before we shall be able to trace with certainty all differences in our mental capacities to differences in the structure of our bodies. Still on this account we are not to be frightened from our belief that all mental differences have this origin, nor hindered from investigating and recording, in consequence of this belief, the material differences which abound in the members of the same species when compared the one with the other."

We shall not, on our part, be debarred by fear of finding our mental or moral capacities reduced to mere corporeal functions from taking account of the very interesting facts which Dr. Bird has accumulated as materials for his theory. The facts of histology have a value of their own altogether apart from such hypotheses as may be built upon them by speculatists of either extreme school. It has been attempted to connect the capacity of the mind with the size or weight of the brain. The specific gravity of the muscular tissues has in like manner been made a test of physical strength or of fatty degeneration of the heart or of other muscular organs. Too little account has, however, been taken, as Dr. Bird rightly remarks, by phrenologists and physiologists, of the different quality of the tissues. He has taken advantage of the opportunities afforded by professional practice among the natives of India in order to study carefully this aspect of the subject. He presents us as the result with a succession of valuable tables, under the respective heads of I. National Differences; II. Sexual Differences; III. Differences characteristic of Age; IV. Temperament Differences. The first of these tables tends to show that the specific gravity of Europeans is greater than that of natives of Bengal as 1·018 is to 1·001. From the superior energy of the European some such result might have been predicted. Not so perhaps the higher degree of heat in the European (98·68 to 97·25) indicated by the thermometer in the mouth. The analysis of the blood goes to show that the Bengalee has more albumen and fewer red corpuscles than the European, comparing Dr. Bird's observations with those of Rodier, Le Canu, and others. What does this poverty in corpuscles indicate? The blood of animals low in the scale—that of molluscs, for instance—contains no red corpuscles. As we trace upwards the vital scale we find these bodies make their appearance few in number in the lower fishes and reptiles. They assume greater proportions in the higher fishes and reptiles, and so on till they attain their maximum development in carnivorous animals and birds. This gradual increase appears to indicate a connexion between the number of the red globules and the degree of organisation. Andral and Gavarret found an increase of red corpuscles accompanying an improvement in the breed of animals. Depletion and starvation have a contrary effect. These bodies are sensibly deficient in the blood of the aged, the chlorotic, the scorbutic, and those who live much shut out from light and fresh air. The apathy of the Bengalee is doubtless due in a measure to a deficiency of red globules in his blood, as compared with the more sanguine European. The like difference has been shown by Becquerel and Rodier, following up the original observations of Le Canu, to exist between men and women. In Dr. Bird's second table the red corpuscles are in men 141·10, against 127·20 in women. The solids of the serum are, on the other hand, in women as 79·52 to 77·80 in men; and water as 791·10 to 779·00. This applies of course to men and women of the same country. Science, Dr. Bird remarks, may in time enable the men of one nation to say to the men of another, "Your blood resembles in its constitution the blood of our women." The differences corresponding to temperament have been equally demonstrated by the test of figures in the case of the sanguineous and lymphatic of both sexes.

Dr. Bird proceeds to classify in detail the agencies whereby the tissues of the body are changed through life. These are use, social condition, climate, mixed parental influence, and hereditary transmission. Upon the first three of these five heads we find Dr. Bird laying down summarily much the same conclusions as we have seen elaborated with immense trouble and fulness by Mr. Buckle. He has not much to add to the chain of proofs by which it has been sought to connect the whole physical and social development of man with the conditions of food, climate, and the aspects of nature. Where our author seeks to introduce into the problem a more distinctively physiological element is in his remarks on the phenomena of hereditary or transmitted qualities. How are we to explain the anomalies which perpetually meet us in sickly children sprung from healthy parents, and the reverse—plain people giving birth to beautiful offspring; genius like that of Aristotle or Newton, Homer or Shakspeare, from parentage of what kind nobody knows? Dr. Bird falls back here upon Vrolik's treatment of Teratology, the branch of science which regards those deviations in structure named monstrosities. Going back to the origin of life in the individual, he conceives in the instant of impregnation certain tendencies or capacities irregularly or unusually communicated to the ovum, which issue, under conditions laid down by teratologists, in exceptional growths, whether on the side of excess or defect. If asked what actual forces regulate the communication of these hypothetical tendencies or capacities between parent and embryo so as to issue in the mental phenomenon which men call a prodigy or a genius, or, on the other hand, in "fœtuses without brains, or to fœtuses whose heads are partitioned out like the heart of a frog or a fish," Dr. Bird is candid enough to reply, "I do not know." He is content to leave the solution wrapped up somewhere in what he confesses himself, "in his ignorance," to have named mixed parental influence. We fail, for our part, to see what good has come from broaching the subject at all, if after all it is simply made "apparent that the so-called laws of hereditary transmission are mere resting places for our minds, wearied with seeking after truth, and that we must refer the unusual phenomenon to a cause or causes with whose nature we are yet unacquainted." As regards the transmission of acquired, or, as he prefers to put it, improved qualities, Dr. Bird inclines to Mr. Combe's belief that these are capable of transmission, subject to the continued application, in the case of children, of those agencies which produced such acquisition or improvement in the parents. Among these we presume him to include both mental and physical aptitudes, insanity as well as bodily disease. Had he attended the recent meeting of the British Association he might have fortified his argument in its bearing upon the mixed class of cerebro-physical disease by the unmistakable fact, demonstrated by M. Brown Sequard, that epilepsy artificially engendered in a guinea-pig has been reproduced in its offspring. So confident is Mr. Bird in the soundness of his method, that he contemplates bringing the subject of crime within the scope of physiological tests. The minute structural and functional difference which exist among members of the same species and families are to form the basis of differentiation:—

"When a sufficient number of these is known, we shall, I think, classify men, not according to their nation, but according to the nature of the materials of which their bodies are composed. And when it is definitely admitted that men have taken their characters from contact with the physical influences among which it has been their lot to be cast; that nations and tribes take their places in the human scale according to their physical good fortune or their physical bad fortune; that the inhabitants of swamps and jungles are necessarily of lower organisation than are the inhabitants of breezy and well-cultivated uplands; that through physical excellence it has been ordained we should attain unto moral excellence; that men must necessarily progress towards perfections, because the physical universe is changing and daily becoming fitter for the growth of a higher race of beings—it shall then be seen what a glorious career is yet before the human race. We shall then cease to regard ourselves as battling our way through life, Ulysses like, the prey of unreasonable doubts and superstitions; and turning our backs upon the night for evermore, and our faces towards the reddening east, we shall walk forward in the strength of a scientific faith—a faith in the certainty, regularity, and, in the aggregate, the upward tendency of all things—to meet the coming day."

In his paper on Idosyncrasy these principles are pushed to still more extreme and startling conclusions. Consciousness itself, to define or explain which has so sorely exercised the souls of psychologists or metaphysicians, is reduced to no more than a property possessed by the spinal as well as by the cerebral vesicles. "It is the fundamental property of nervous matter in which all other properties are overlaid." "Memory is a property also possessed by the vesicular matter of the spine and brain." "On consciousness and memory, according to the degree of differentiation which the issue has undergone, we have appetite, hunger, lust, &c.; instinct, such as to make fire, build honeycombs, houses, dams, &c.; feeling—anger, gratitude, hope, &c., and intelligence overlaid." We should expect to find Dr. Bird on the side of Dr. Pinel and other French physicians, who have maintained that sensation and emotion can be maintained both in the spinal process and in the brain after the head is severed from the body; a theory which it was sought in vain to verify in the case of the murderer Tropmann. The same laws apply to conclusions and generalizations. "Conclusions are those conditions of the cerebral motions when in concentrated form they tend to pour themselves upon the muscles, and so become transmuted into walking, talking, writing, the gestures of passion, &c. This pouring of the cerebral motion on the muscles is what we call the exercise of the will, and the character of the so-called voluntary motion will be according to the locality of the grey matter in which the conclusion reached is situated. A man will be lustful, avaricious, ambitious, intellectual, according to the tissue in which the point of attention around which the cerebral motions gather is oftenest placed." Truth and falsehood, it appears to Dr. Bird, depend on the tone of the tissues rather than on the process of differentiation, as also courage and cowardice. "When the cerebral motions habitually converge in the highest brain-tissues then he thinks we have the phenomena of intelligent adoration." It is certainly interesting to watch by the light of the most recent and extreme physiology the hypothetical genesis of the saint as well as of the hero and the sage, even if we feel less sanguine than Dr. Bird as to the inherent power of the new system to produce them without limit and without fail. He comes more within the limits of what we regard as sensible and practical in his essay upon Drink-craving. His experience in India has provided him with many facts of interest and importance bearing upon the disposing causes of this disease and the methods of restraint or cure. What his aspirations tend to is the establishment of a sanatorium, specially organised and legally constituted, for the compulsory reception of confirmed drunkards. Such a reformatory, under the name of the Spin Huis, existed in the last century at Amsterdam. Institutions of the same kind are said to exist in the United States of America, and to be springing up in Scotland, as in the Isle of Skye. For such a reformatory in India he points out a most desirable site at Kangra, where a large portion of the European troops are cantoned. Of total abstinence and of the pledge he has nothing but hard things to say. He has often observed that teetotalers are great scandalmongers. Others, in virtue of the abstinence which they practise, are vain of and ostentatious about their superior goodness; and others again are excessively libidinous. "Pickpockets are so, and they are exceedingly temperate." He has found teetotalers as a whole to be selfish, uncharitable, and badly qualified for the offices of friendship. They have, too, excesses of their own. When they are not great smokers, they are most probably great tea-drinkers, great swillers of gingerbeer, or great gluttons. Dr. Bird is as forcible in his way of uttering his views as he is in pushing them to their utmost limit. In both respects he does much to undo the influence which his ability, zeal, and candour might otherwise entitle him to exercise upon the public.

The Turkey.—How many know anything of the habitat and natural history of that very interesting bird—when roasted—the turkey? I will venture to answer my own question, and say, very few; and, if you grant me space, will offer what information I have been able to acquire either from actual experience or from books. The French word "Dinde" points directly to an Eastern origin; and French lexicographers coolly call the bird in question "Poule d'Inde," as if there were no doubt about it. The Germans, with a precision which would do them honour, if it were only accurate, say, "Kalekutischer Hahn," thus fixing Calicut, on the western shore of the Indian peninsula, as its birth-place. We content ourselves with the adoption of the name of a country which has no connection whatever with the bird. Originally the Spaniards gave to the turkey the name of "Pavon de las Indias;" but their modern descendants, too indolent to inquire as to the correctness of their statement, tell us that it is "a domestic fowl, brought from Turkey (ave domestica traide de Turquia)." The truth is that Turkey, whether in Europe or Asia, has no more to do with the turkey of the farm-yard and the kitchen than it has with the potato. It is difficult to say when the

HENRY HAYES
To his Patrons throughout the Colony.
Having, after a trying illness, resumed business, interested parties say, "Oh, but Hayes is so dear." To this I answer, that "Hayes's dearness consists in a thorough knowledge of his trade in choosing superior goods, in studying his customers' tastes and figures, in fitting them properly, in employing Good HAND workmen at fair wages. The 33 years he has traded in George-street, never having had an hour's machine work; it is these great facts, that the entire colony can endorse, that constitutes, not Hayes's dearness, but his cheapness—his charges not being 7½ per cent. higher for the right stuff than those of slop tailors for pure rubbish.

GREAT SALE OF RICH FATTENING STATIONS IN THE BLIGH DISTRICT,

Comprising the following well-known Properties, viz.:—

LOT 1.—BULLAROORA.

This magnificent run is situated on the Castlereagh River, about 30 miles from Coonamble, and contains an area of about 100,000 acres, by survey, of the richest fattening pasturage of this noted district. The country is nearly all myall and salt-bush, and, from the abundance of its water supply from the Castlereagh River, Merimbra, Terambone, and Gunyilaah Creeks, as well as from numerous warrambools and lagoons, including the well-known Yarramon Lagoon, Gidgromber, Murrah, Mangon, and other waterholes, its carrying capacity is estimated as quite equal to 20,000 HEAD OF CATTLE.

BULLAROORA is believed to be the earliest formed station on the rich plains of this part of the colony, and for about thirty years never changed hands.

The improvements are very substantial, and in good order. They comprise a comfortable four-roomed cottage, with shingle roof, kitchen, servant's room, and store; stockman's cottage of 4 rooms, outhouses, milking and horse yards, &c. There is also a good paddock of about 200 acres; and the stockyards, which are substantially erected, contain every convenience for working a very large herd of cattle.

With this choice property will be sold
4000 HEAD OF CATTLE, more or less,
a very superior quiet herd of the noted B over tri brand, which have been very favourably known to the butchers for a great many years.

LOT 2.—GIDGENBILLA, situated on, and having about ten miles frontage to the Castlereagh River, 45 miles below Coonamble. The whole of the run has been recently surveyed, and its area is reckoned at 47,000 acres, and is all of the richest description, consisting principally of myall and saltbush plains, with abundance of herbage, and well watered throughout. As a breeding and fattening run its qualities are not to be surpassed.

The Improvements comprise a good four-roomed shingled cottage and kitchen, yards, &c.; a considerable quantity of fencing has already been erected, and sufficient stuff also has been carted on to the boundary line to go far towards completing the fence. A large quantity of wire now on the station may be taken by the purchaser at a valuation.

With this choice property will be sold
2200 HEAD OF CATTLE, more or less,
exceedingly well-bred and quiet, nearly all grown cattle, there being a very few (if any) between the ages of 6 and 18 months old, and about 400 to 600 of the cattle are now nearly fit for the butchers.

, Stores, working plant, and other belongings appertaining to the above properties to be taken by the respective purchasers by arbitration in the usual way.

TERMS.—One-third cash, residue by promissory notes at 1, 2, and 3 years' date, with interest added at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, secured upon the property by mortgage in the usual way.

Preliminary Notice.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from the proprietor to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, Sydney, on MONDAY, the 24th April next, at o'clock,

The above choice fattening properties, full particulars of which will be shortly published.

☞ Particular attention is directed to the above stations. The proprietor has placed them in the market for bona fide sale, with a determination to abide by the highest bid at the auction.

As fattening stations they stand unsurpassed by any in the noted Bligh district, and their sale affords the best opportunity which has been offered for some time for owners of large herds in other parts of the colony or Queensland to obtain rich fattening runs within easy reach of the metropolitan market for preparing their grown stock for the butchers.

J. Y. MILLS has received instructions from W. Tindale, Esq., to sell by auction, at Payten's Hotel, Parramatta, on TUESDAY, 14th March, at 11.30 a.m.,

All that property known as his orchard, situated on the Kissing Point Road at its intersection with Pemberton-street, being the whole of section 4 of the subdivision of the Pemberton Grange Estate, and undoubtedly, from its situation and elevation, the pick of the lot. It is bounded on three sides by roads, and surrounded with a substantial four-rail iron-bark fence, and joins on its southern side the splendid residence of Henry Harvey, Esq., whose orchard and estate is sufficient proof of what this property could be made in the hands of a resident proprietor, as a fence only divides them.

The aspect of the property is a gentle slope towards the morning sun, and from the centre of the property there is an uninterrupted view of nearly the whole town and park of Parramatta.

The improvements consist of a four-roomed brick cottage with ample room for any addition: barn and stables. The land is divided into orchards, cultivation and grass paddock, barn yard, and vegetable garden, with abundant supply of water. The orchard consists of about four acres of orange trees, coming in full bearing, and about one acre of other fruits.

From its eligible situation, and many advantages this property offers to persons requiring permanent home in a nice locality a chance seldom to be met with.

ALLOTMENTS in Clinton and Cowper streets
And various Suburban Lots.

Under instructions from the Executors in the Estate of the late N. Mandelson, Esq.

F. S. COHEN and CO. have been favoured with instructions to sell by auction, at their Rooms, Auburn-street, Goulburn, on WEDNESDAY, MARCH 29, at 12 o'clock,

That magnificent, important, and highly valuable property, known as MANDELSON'S HOTEL,

Mandelson, Esq.), and is fitted and furnished throughout in a superior manner, with every regard to the comforts and conveniences required by such extensive premises, as well as for the purpose of carrying on a very large business.

The premises contain, on the ground floor 9 bedrooms, 6 parlours, 2 pantries, bar, taproom, and splendid hall paved with marble; whilst on the first floor are 18 bedrooms—airy and well ventilated, 2 parlours, 3 large parlours with folding doors, which when thrown open form a splendid room 55 feet 6 x 18 feet 6, capable of dining 120 persons comfortably. On this floor is also a large billiard-room, fitted with one of
with appointments, lamps, &c., complete. The second floor contains 6 convenient-sized bedrooms, both single and double. At the rear in the kitchen, 31 feet x 15 feet 6, with scullery, &c., as also 2 bathrooms fitted for hot, cold, and shower baths.

The yard arrangements are unrivalled by any similar establishment in the colonies, and consist of a WELL with a never-failing supply of water, fitted with a powerful force-pump, from which water is supplied to the bath-rooms, as well as various parts of the main building. The stables are built of brick with shingled roof, and contain 9 stalls and 4 loose boxes, with loft over all. At the back are the coachhouse and sheds, fitted with racks and mangers capable of accommodating 30 horses. There is also a gas-house with two large gasometers, from which the hotel is supplied with light at a very trifling expense.

It is only under very rare exceptional circumstances that an opportunity occurs of purchasing such
so splendidly situated, being within 100 yards of THE TERMINUS OF THE GREAT SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

In the limits of an advertisement it is next to impossible to describe fully the numerous advantages enjoyed by this favourite house, which has been the leading hotel for very many years, having always been favoured with the patronage of
THE ELITE OF THE COLONY.

To those seeking a retreat from the bustle of the metropolis—to those visiting Goulburn for the purpose of enjoying its invigorating climate, as well as those who, from sanitary motives, visit
THE FAMED CITY OF THE SOUTH,
this well-known establishment has at all times been their favourite resort, as offering conveniences for comfort unobtainable at any other hotel.

This remarkably fine property occupies, without exception, the CHOICEST BUSINESS POSITION in the city of Goulburn, and, commanding
AN IMMENSE TRAFFIC, would, if purchased and conducted by a thorough business man, be the means of his

They are well and faithfully built of brick, with shingled roof, each containing large shop 17 feet 6 x 15 feet, with plate-glass fronts, parlour at back, 2 bedrooms upstairs, with kitchen and servant's room at rear.

☞ These are really MOST ELIGIBLE BUSINESS PROPERTIES, and will be sold either separately or in one lot. Their proximity to the railway station always commands permanent tenants, the whole being let at rentals of from £50 to £75 per annum.

The instructions for sale are POSITIVE; and the opportunity now presented of securing VALUABLE and PERMANENT INVESTMENTS should not be lost sight of.

LOT 3.—FOUR FIRST-CLASS SHOPS ADJOINING THE ABOVE, situated in Sloane-street, containing shop 15 feet 6 x 15 feet, parlour and 2 bedrooms, with kitchen and servant's room, &c.

, These properties are brought into the market for ABSOLUTE and POSITIVE UNRESERVED SALE, in accordance with the trusts contained in the will of the late proprietor; and the purchaser of any of these valuable lots will have the satisfaction of owning FREEHOLD PROPERTIES second to none in VALUE or POSITION in any provincial city in the LOT 4A.—COMFORTABLE FAMILY RESIDENCE adjoining the above, containing 2 bedrooms, 2 parlours, kitchen, servant's room, and necessary outhouses, &c.

The sale of the above dwelling will present a favourable opportunity for securing most faithfully-built and well-situated Family Residences, in corroboration of which the auctioneers would just simply state that they have rarely ever been without tenants.

At the rear is a LARGE STONE STORE with shingled roof capable of storing 500 tons.

This is a well-known property, and from its situation and many business conveniences ought to command the attention of those seeking really good premises.
